BLOOMINGTON NEWS LETTER.

A WEEKLY ORDINARY, 25 CENTS.

SATURDAY MORNING, MARCH 22, 1856.

The New York Tribune has done a deed of great magnanimity and justice. The accidental killing of Mr. Booth, by being struck down in the street by a car, was a very trivial matter, and there was no occasion for the carriage of the body into the railroad car, at the expense of the toll road company. The New York Tribune has done a deed of great magnanimity and justice.

FROM MAX'S JOURNAL.

The Bonnet and the Billiard.

The editor of the Bates' Intelligencer was writing in a hotel in Washington, when he disturbed the following facts:

"We are a little boy, of some ten or twelve years old, and no longer a boy at all, at least in appearance, especially when we have on our straw hat and our blue coat. We have a grey beard, and our hair is grey, and our face is not that of a boy, but of an old man. We are not afraid of this, for we have never feared it. We have a grey beard, and our hair is grey, and our face is not that of a boy, but of an old man. We are not afraid of this, for we have never feared it.
