The Bloomington News-Letter is a weekly Democratic newspaper, devoted to news, politics, literature, agricultural and mechanical interests, etc., published in Bloomington, Indiana. The newspaper is published by J. O. Carlton, publisher, and is known for its editorials and coverage of local events and issues.

The front page of the newspaper features a prominent headline and several smaller articles, along with advertisements and a list of names and addresses. The layout is typical of a 19th-century newspaper, with a cleanly organized layout and clear typography.

The content of the newspaper includes news stories, editorials, and advertisements. The editorials discuss political and social issues, while the news stories cover local events and developments. The advertisements are placed strategically throughout the newspaper, with some appearing on the front page and others in the interior sections.

The newspaper is an important historical source for understanding the social and political climate of the time, as well as for researching specific events or issues. The newspaper is a valuable resource for anyone interested in the history of Bloomington, Indiana, and the nation at large.

Overall, the Bloomington News-Letter is a well-preserved and informative resource that offers a unique window into the past.
