Note: The Interim Apportionment Act of February 1, 1834, included Grant County in a senatorial district but failed to assign the county to a representative district. In the 1834-35 session, however, David Kilgore served in the House from a district that included both Delaware and Grant counties. The two counties are shown as part of the same district on this map.

Note: The small strip of land south of Kosciusko and north of Miami and Wabash counties "had apparently been overlooked in the general apportionment of lands." Pence and Armstrong, Indiana Boundaries, 65. Whitley County was not assigned by the Apportionment Act of January 13, 1836. In a statute approved February 6, 1836, Whitley was attached to Huntington County for judicial purposes (Law, 1836, p. 86), and it is so shown on this apportionment map.
